PROFESSIONAL CHOICE

FULL FRAME

DIGITAL IMAGING

What is Full-Frame?

The common terms used to classified camera sensor are "Full Frame?" and "Crop Sensor". In simple term, full-frame sensor refers to sensor size that has the same dimensions as the 35mm film format (36mmx24mm), and crop sensor refers to any sensor smaller than full-frame.

Full-Frame VS Crop Sensor

A crop sensor shares the same rectangular perspective (3:2 ratio) but it is considerably smaller. For APS-C sensor, it is approx. 50% smaller.

The size difference for crop sensors is determined by a crop factor. The APS-C sensor has a 1.5x crop factor and the micro 4/3 sensor has a 2x crop factor. The bigger the crop factors, the smaller the sensor. Many often misunderstand that a crop sensor magnifies the focal length of any lenses., and hence the it provides a slightly further 'reach'.
